April 20, 2004
Paul Desruisseaux

UC Santa Barbara Offers Admission to 19,325 for Fall 2004

The University of California, Santa Barbara has offered a place in its fall 2004 entering class to a total of 19,325 high school students. The prospective freshmen were selected from a pool of 36,651 applicants. Of those admitted, 93 percent are enrolled in California high schools.

Another 8,256 applications from students seeking to transfer to UCSB are currently under review. Transfer admissions decisions will be announced in early May.

The applicants admitted for the fall’s freshman class had an average total combined score on the required SAT I examinations of 1248, up 9 points over last year. The average high school Grade Point Average was 3.98, up from 3.94 last year. Among all applicants, 10,921 had a Grade Point Average of 4.0 or higher.

"We are extremely pleased by the excellent and diverse class of applicants that we have admitted," said UCSB Chancellor Henry T. Yang. "Right now my colleagues and I are deeply involved in a concerted effort to ensure that the class that we enroll in the fall will be our strongest ever, both in academic quality and diversity. I am appreciative of the efforts of so many people and departments on our campus in helping to attract such exceptional students to UCSB."

All of the UC undergraduate campuses are releasing admissions statistics today. The UC Office of the President is posting systemwide statistics on the World-Wide Web at UCSB acceptance letters were mailed on March 15. Applicants also were able to learn if they were admitted via a protected web site. Applicants who have been accepted by any UC campus have until May 1 to submit a signed Statement of Intent to Register. UCSB expects its fall 2004 entering class to number approximately 3,950.

"Our admitted fall class has very impressive credentials," said Christine Van Gieson, UCSB director of admissions. "The average student has taken 45 academic courses---that's 15 more than the minimum required---and has been involved in an array of leadership and volunteer activities. I'm just struck by what an accomplished group this is."

Of all applicants admitted to UCSB, 44 percent identified themselves as members of a racial or ethnic minority group. The race or ethnicity of applicants is not disclosed to the campuses by the UC system until after admissions decisions are made.

As a percentage of the total number of California students accepted by UCSB for the fall, members of underrepresented minority groups (African-American, American Indian, and Chicano and Latino students) account for 19.9 percent, up from 19.3 percent last year. The total number of California applicants from all underrepresented minority groups combined who were accepted by UCSB was 3,584, or 258 more than last year, an increase of 7.8 percent. The 3,058 Chicano and Latino applicants accepted were 293 more than last year. The number of African-American and American Indian applicants who were accepted totaled 35 fewer than last year.

Chancellor Yang attributes the campus's success in attracting a highly qualified and very diverse applicant pool to "the determined efforts of many people and every department at UCSB." Faculty and staff members as well as students and alumni are involved in a variety of activities aimed at making personal contact with applicants who have been accepted, talking to them about the campus and the opportunities it offers, and answering questions.

Chancellor Yang serves as host at a series of receptions UCSB sponsors around the state for applicants who have been accepted. At these popular events, volunteers from the campus---faculty and staff members, students, administrators, and alumni---speak about the institution, its programs and opportunities.
In addition, this year's open house for admitted students and their families, called "Spring Insight," drew an estimated 4,000 visitors to the UCSB campus on April 5. Record numbers of visitors have taken part in weekday and Saturday tours of UCSB during the first two weeks of April.

Budget reductions prevent the University of California from honoring its longstanding commitment to provide a place within the UC system for all UC-eligible California applicants. In an effort to meet this commitment, UC is offering such students who were not accepted a guarantee of admission if they successfully complete the first two years of course work at a California community college. At UCSB, this Guaranteed Transfer Option is being offered to 1,750 applicants who were not accepted.

Related Links

UC Systemwide Statistics

About UC Santa Barbara

The University of California, Santa Barbara is a leading research institution that also provides a comprehensive liberal arts learning experience. Our academic community of faculty, students, and staff is characterized by a culture of interdisciplinary collaboration that is responsive to the needs of our multicultural and global society. All of this takes place within a living and learning environment like no other, as we draw inspiration from the beauty and resources of our extraordinary location at the edge of the Pacific Ocean.