

UC SANTA BARBARA

THE Current

October 4, 2006

Paul Desruisseaux

Former President William J. Clinton and Entrepreneur Paul Orfalea to Take Part in October 13 Global Issues Dialogue in Santa Barbara

Former President William J. Clinton will visit Santa Barbara next week to participate in a public dialogue on global issues that will help inaugurate UC Santa Barbara's Orfalea Center for Global and International Studies and the university's new master's degree program in that field.

Sponsored by the Orfalea Foundations, the program will be held at the Arlington Theatre, 1317 State St., on Friday, October 13, from 1:15 to 2:15 p.m., with doors opening at 12:15 p.m.

Titled "Leadership for the Global Future," the event will be structured as a conversation between President Clinton and Paul Orfalea, the entrepreneur and business leader who founded the Kinko's chain of copy stores (now known as FedEx Kinko's).

The event will also include an announcement of a commitment by the Orfalea Foundations to The Clinton Global Initiative, which was the focus of a major international conference in New York last month. The Orfalea commitment includes support for all four focus areas of the Clinton Global Initiative: Poverty Alleviation,

Energy and Climate Change, Global Health, and Mitigating Religious and Ethnic Conflict.

Paul Orfalea is a distinguished visiting lecturer in the Global and International Studies Program at UCSB, where he teaches a popular course in global business. Orfalea and the Orfalea Family Foundation provided the seed money for the Orfalea Center at UCSB and the university's novel graduate program in global and international studies. Both the center and the graduate program are focused on the preparation of professionals to work in the global non-profit sector as well as in international government and multinational business. A portion of the proceeds from ticket sales for the October 13 event will go to support the center and the M.A. program.

"The Orfalea Center for Global and International Studies provides an opportunity to impact management practices internationally," said Natalie Orfalea, chairperson of the Orfalea Fund and the Orfalea Family Foundation. "The growing collaborative efforts among business, government, and non-profit organizations in strategic planning, communication, and the execution of global policies offer much hope for affecting change in our world community."

General admission tickets for the event are $75 and $45 and go on sale at the Arlington Theatre at 11 a.m. Thursday, Oct. 5. For information and availability, call the ticket office after 10 a.m. Thursday at (805) 963-4408.

A total of 600 free tickets for UC Santa Barbara students will be available from the Associated Students box office on the UCSB campus, starting at 9 a.m. Friday, Oct. 6. Students must present a valid UCSB identification to obtain a ticket, which will be distributed on a first-come, first-served, one ticket per student basis.

UCSB's Orfalea Center and the M.A. program in global and international studies are dedicated to exploring issues related to global civil society, with a special emphasis on the role of non-governmental, non-profit service organizations. The center sponsors conferences, seminars, and research projects. The master's program offers a two-year curriculum, aimed at global leadership. The first M.A. class enrolled this fall with 18 students, several of them from other countries, including Canada, China, Iran, Serbia, and Trinidad and Tobago. An internship abroad is one of the program's requirements.

More information about Global and International Studies at UC Santa Barbara and the Orfalea Center is available on the Web: <http://www.global.ucsb.edu/>

Related Links Global & International Studies and The Orfalea Center

About UC Santa Barbara

The University of California, Santa Barbara is a leading research institution that also provides a comprehensive liberal arts learning experience. Our academic community of faculty, students, and staff is characterized by a culture of interdisciplinary collaboration that is responsive to the needs of our multicultural and global society. All of this takes place within a living and learning environment like no other, as we draw inspiration from the beauty and resources of our extraordinary location at the edge of the Pacific Ocean.