

UC SANTA BARBARA

THE Current

Campus + Community

Capps Center fall lineup: queer nuns, election-year politics and Latinx environmentalism

Keith Hamm

October 11, 2024

Share this article

A trio of public talks hosted this fall by UC Santa Barbara's Walter H. Capps Center for the Study of Ethics, Religion, and Public Life will unpack a range of topics common among national conversations in today's America, from gender and sexuality to politics and the environment.

As part of the center's Wade Clark Roof Lecture on Human Rights series, UC Riverside religious studies professor Melissa Wilcox will be on campus Oct. 15 with "Dodging the Sisters: Why Queer Nuns Keep Going Viral," a broader look at the Sisters of Perpetual Indulgence, queer and trans nuns caught up in today's culture wars. Cosponsored by the departments of religious and feminist studies, the event takes place 5-6:30 p.m. at Henley Hall.

An online-only event accessible via Zoom, "Election 2024 and Religion," will bring together UCSB associate professor of religious studies Joseph Blankholm, University of Pennsylvania's Anthea Butler and Julie Ingersoll from the University of North Florida to discuss religion in the competing visions of American values and governance, particularly in the context of the rise in secularization, religious diversity and Christian nationalism. Their roundtable webinar takes place 5-6:15 p.m. Oct. 22.

“Featuring a panel of experts on American religion and politics, this webinar fits squarely within our mission,” said Dusty Hoesly, the center’s associate director.

“The Capps Center promotes discussion of how ethical teachings and values relate to civic life, and we are committed to the fundamental belief that public dialogue and an informed, engaged citizenry are vital to democratic society.”

From 5-6:30 p.m. Nov. 14 at Henley Hall, Amanda Baugh — an associate professor of religious studies at California State University, Northridge — will shed light on la tierra environmentalism of Spanish-speaking Catholics with her new book, “Falling in Love with Nature: The Values of Latinx Catholic Environmentalism.”

This event, part of the Capps Forum on Ethics and Public Policy, is cosponsored by the departments of religious studies and Chicana and Chicano studies, the Environmental Studies Program and the Bren School of Environmental Science & Management.

The events are free and open to the public.

Media Contact

Keith Hamm

Social Sciences, Humanities & Fine Arts Writer

(805) 893-2191

keithhamm@ucsb.edu

Share this article

About UC Santa Barbara

The University of California, Santa Barbara is a leading research institution that also provides a comprehensive liberal arts learning experience. Our academic community of faculty, students, and staff is characterized by a culture of interdisciplinary collaboration that is responsive to the needs of our multicultural and global society. All of this takes place within a living and learning environment like no other, as we draw inspiration from the beauty and resources of our extraordinary location at the edge of the Pacific Ocean.